Mask of the Samurai

Samurai of the sky domain were once guardians of what used to be the ruler of it all. During the great purge, when many masks and wings were set ablaze as a warning from a mysterious group of angel rebels, a great deal of samurai angels were lost from the fighting. Only a few live, but have retired their days of guard work. One still wears the mask though. David, the red samurai stands tall on the peak of the sky domain, watching over all, batting any threat away.

Samurai's Perseverance

During the purge David survived, but at a cost. His wings were struck down by an angel rebel, causing them to shatter on the ground into pieces so small you could barely see them at all. It caused the small island to shake with disturbance, making the few left shards fall off into the void below. Like that, David was deemed a wingless angel. Although the unfortunate circumstances, David flew anyways, blooming with perseverance. The last few shards David could save stay with him while he guards the sky domain as a reminder to keep going and to never give up.
